FALL/WINTER COLLECTION 2018

PRESS RELEASE JULY 2018 - For immediate release

THE TACK WAY

This collection was inspired by industrial simplicity and named after Frans Tack. Tack was the owner of the former flax retting installation, where we were lucky enough to photograph this collection.

Long ago, here in Belgium, flax was retted in the river Lys. Then as time went on, retting moved to concrete tanks. Modern day dew retting happens on the field. During this process, the fiber comes loose from the stem of the plant allowing it to be spun into yarn. For this to happen, the plant lays for weeks on the field exposed to rain, dew and sun, which breaks down the pectin that hold the fiber to the stem of the plant.

Frans Tack was a flax farmer and water-retter his whole life, not far from our mill, in the heart of the Flemish flax region. We spent the day between his water retting tanks and warehouses, photographing our 2018 fall/winter collection.
